

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A primary power system and a secondary power system are operable to supply power to at least one cooling system component in a cooling system. The amount of power supplied by the primary power system and the secondary power system to the at least one cooling system component is controlled based on an operating level threshold for the at least one cooling system component.

5